Moved from New York to Bennington, Vermont before immigrating to Canada. Note that he does not appear in the UEL lists...Canniff suggests he lived in Dutchess County, New York.

Family of nine children.

The Wallbridge Family (Pioneer Life on the Bay of Quinte, pages 894-899)

"Amid the peaceful hamlets of old Dorsetshire, and bound by the chalk cliffs of the Channel, the forbear of the Wallbridges led the life of an English country gentleman until aroused by the dictated of conscience or imbued with the fever of war, he became engulfed in the unhappy issues of Monmouth's rebellion and, like his princely leader, had to fly the country.

"The colonies of America were at that time the natural harbor of safety for such a refugee; and it was there that Henry Wallbridge and his wife, Anna Amos, sought their new home, secure in the friendly sympathies of their Connecticut neighbors, and encouraged for their future by and abundant promise of prosperity.

"In their family was a son, William H., who was born in 1690, and in 1713 married Abigail Lawrence. An issue of this marriage was Zebulon Wallbridge, who was born in 1718. Zebulon married Sarah Fobes (sic), and was the father of Asa and Elijah Wallbridge, the Canadian pioneers.

"Previous to the Revolutionary War Zebulon Wallbridge lived with his family near Saratoga, N.Y., but seemingly his son Elijah migrated into Vermont, which was of a later settlement, for he has been described as a United Empire Loyalist from Bennington. It is difficult to determine what part the Wallbridges took in the war. But whatever parts they played, there were members of the family on both sides; for the war was the cause of dissension among them. Elijah Wallbridge attacked at military prison and succeeded in liberating a number of imprisoned fellow sympathizers. The guardianship of his old musket, which was carefully retained in the possession of the family, passed into the keeping of the Hon. Lewis Wallbridge.

"At the conclusion of the war, for reasons which, if not possible to state definitely, can easily be inferred. Asa Wallbridge left the State. An ardent sportsman and inured to hardships, he was not to be awed by the uncertainties of pioneering. Migrating to New Brunswick, he settled on the Jim Sack River, where at what is now known as Wallbridge's Creek, he worked on a farm and ran a saw mill until, in 1790, he moved westward.

"The shores of the Bay of Quinte in those days were rich preserves for the sportsman. Marvelous accounts of the game to be shot and the fish to be caught, were told in Lower Canada, and, as is the way, were magnified in the telling. Such a prospect appealed to the sporting instincts of Asa Wallbridge, and induced him, with four friends, to come to Upper Canada intent on shooting and fishing.

"The hunters made their headquarters at Singleton's Creek, which was the mouth of the Moira River; and in all the districts round about, shot and fished and trapped to their hearts' content. Their prospect of the country quickly led them to perceive its great value; and with the intention of buying a large area, and in order to subscribe the purchase money, the five men joined in partnership. Asa Wallbridge returned to the States to procure the money from his brother Elijah; but, as some accounts narrate, he was arrested as a spy.

"Elijah Wallbridge, who was accompanied by his son William H., first came to Canada in 1800, and two years later, bought from a surveyor names Smith two thousand acres of land in Ameliasburgh. The land stretched from the Anderson place, included Long Point, and extended from the Bay Front to the marsh in the rear. Elijah divided up into five farms of about 300 acres each, one of which he gave to each of his children, who were all, with the exception of one daughter, comfortably settled there by the year 1812. A further lot of five hundred acres he reserved to common pasturage, as was the custom in the American colonies. These farms were the first proper homes of the Wallbridges in Upper Canada. They are for the most part still possessed by descendants of Wallbridges, and the district is called the Wallbridge tract.

"Asa eventually returned to Canada. He never married but lives on Massassaga Point where, on the farm of his nephew William H. Wallbridge, he died in 1827. He is said to have built the first house in Belleville. It was a log structure, such as he could live and store his furs in; and stood on the vacant lot on the corner of Front and Dundas streets, north of Clark's blacksmith shop. The home, with some additions, was afterwards used as a hotel by a man called Simpson. After his death his widow bought the lot on the north side of Dundas Street, where it meets Front street, and there she partially erected a frame house, which was acquired by William H. Wallbridge, who completed it and afterwards lived there for many years. William H. Wallbridge engaged extensively in business as a lumber merchant, a trader, and a farmer. His square timber was rafted to Quebec, and supplies brought back on the return trip.

"Possessed of considerable means before coming into Canada, and being men of a high mental calibre and sound business insight, the Wallbridges have always been prominent and prosperous. From their first incoming they were noted for their sporting prowess and daring feats, for their wealth and for their lands, for their ability and enterprise.

Elijah Wallbridge, who married Margaret Halloway, with his family, made a short settlement at Meyer's Creek; and was one of the principal citizens to petition Governor Gore to give a name of greater distinction to the growing village. It was in response to their petition that the Governor conferred the name of Belleville, in honor of his wife, Lady Bella Gore.

"The Hon. Lewis Wallbridge also was a distinguished member of the family and citizens of the colony. He was born in 1816, which was the year Belleville was surveyed into lots. After two years' schooling in Montreal, Lewis Wallbridge was sent to the Upper Canada College. Choosing the law for his profession, he was, in 1855, elected a member of the Law Society of Upper Canada. Quickly coming to be regarded as one of the most brilliant lawyers in Central Ontario, he received, in 1863, his patent as Solicitor-General of Upper Canada. A few months later, in the same year, he was elected Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of Upper and Lower Canada; he was the first Speaker when Parliament met in the new Parliament buildings at Ottawa. He held other distinctions and offices. He presided over the debates on the Confederation of the Provinces; his parliamentary constituency was East Hastings; and he was a director of the Bank of Upper Canada. In 1882 he had the honor to be appointed Chief Justice of the Queen's Bench for Manitoba, a high position to which he lent the lustre of his fine character and sterling ability until his death in 1887.

"A brother of the Hon. Lewis Wallbridge, Francis Wallbridge, was, for many years one of the leading lumber merchants of Canada. Thomas C. Wallbridge not only followed the profession which seems to peculiarly claim the members of the family, and became a barrister, but was a mill-owner, too.

"Another representative of this family who has developed into an able lawyer and prominent man of affairs is Francis S. Wallbridge, a great-grandson of the pioneer Elijah. Born some forty odd years ago, he received his education from the Belleville High School and the Upper Canada College. Possessed of the traditional family taste for law, he was articled with his uncle, the Hon. Lewis Wallbridge, Q.C., of Belleville. After spending the last year of his articles with the firm of Flint and Sherry, he was called to the Bar in 1884, and after a couple of years, entered for a short time in partnership with Francis Marskell, in Belleville, under the firm name of Wallbridge and Marskell; and after the dissolution of that partnership continued the practice of law in Belleville by himself. Entering the arena of municipal politics he soon found success, for after serving as alderman for four years he was elected Mayor of the City of Belleville in 1893. "The Globe," in a special article, says of him: "Having succeeded to the business of his uncle, the Hon. Lewis Wallbridge, Q.C., late Chief Justice of Manitoba, he has won for himself a deservedly high reputation as a man of ability and integrity." Evidence of this is furnished in the fact of his elevation to the Mayor's chair at an age when most men with a predilection for public life regard the position of alderman as a distant dream."

"He has in his possession many old heirlooms of the family; among others may be mentioned the first large mirror brought to Meyer's Creek; it was carried in his grandmother's arms when she made the journey from Kingston on horseback. Another relic is an old musket, supposed to have been brought from the United States by Asa Wallbridge in 1890. And to have seen service in the Revolutionary War. There is also a rocking chair a hundred years old, and some mahogany furniture made in the States in the time of President Adams.

"The pioneer, Elijah Wallbridge, died in Trenton in 1842, and was buried in the St. Thomas Churchyard, Belleville, His wife, Margaret Halloway, died at Milton, Saratoga County, N.Y. in 1792. Elias, a son of the Pioneer, served as an officer in the militia in the Lyon MacKenzie Rebellion. He married his wife, Olive Shelley, when on a hunting expedition in New York State; her father kept the hotel at Watertown, where Elias was staying."
